

HISPASAT presents its telecommunications service offer at ANGA CABLE 2013

- For the first time HISPASAT attends this event, where the most important telecommunications companies go to present their latest technological advances.

Madrid, 3th June, 2013.- HISPASAT, the Spanish satellite telecommunications operator, presents its complete telecommunications service offer at the annual “Anga Cable 2013” conference. The event, in which HISPASAT participates for the first time this year, takes place in Cologne (Germany) from the 4th to the 6th of June. This fair annually brings together more than 15,000 visitors from the telecommunications sector, from more than 80 different countries, to debate and present their latest technology.

During these three days, HISPASAT will present its varied portfolio of services via satellite in its coverage areas, and will inform about its latest contributions in areas as diverse as mobile telephony, high speed Internet access or the development of corporate networks. In addition, thanks to its powerful fleet of satellites, HISPASAT brings other interesting business opportunities to its clients, among which the distribution of television and radio content, video streaming or broadband services in mobile environments, such as boats and trains, stand out.
